

Clarkston Home Alliance

Is Clarkston Home Alliance the right fit for your family?

Do you enjoy being your child's primary teacher?

Do you enjoy the flexibility of educating at home or choosing your own curriculum?

Are you currently educating your child at home or see education at home as a long-term goal?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, Clarkston Home Alliance may be what you're looking for.

How is Clarkston Home Alliance different from Clarkston Online?

Clarkston Home Alliance (CHA) is a partnership with families who have chosen in the past to educate at home and/or will continue to educate at home in future years.

Clarkston Online is focused on providing a short-term solution for families who are choosing to educate from home due to the current pandemic and who will be returning to the classroom in the future.

Is there a designated curriculum?

Clarkston Home Alliance does offer a free, online curriculum for families who choose it. However, we recognize that you may already have a preferred curriculum and as your child's primary teacher, you know what your child needs to be successful.

Can my high school student earn a high school diploma?

Yes. Clarkston Home Alliance (CHA) is an alternative learning experience within the Clarkston School District. Families and students can work with their designated CHA teacher to plan a path to a traditional high school diploma.

Is the program really that flexible?

Yes. As your child's primary teacher you have lots of options about how and when your child(ren) learn.

Are there state requirements?

Clarkston Home Alliance is an alternative learning experience within the Clarkston School District. As a public school entity, we are bound by certain rules and regulations governing public schools, coursework, graduation and assessments. To learn more about those regulations and how they apply to your vision for your children, please contact CHA directly.
